

Encourage your future managers to work better together...

...Personal development training for Graduates.

There is a big difference between the pressures, responsibilities and expectations of higher education and those of the work place. No matter how intense or advanced the degree course, Graduates need assistance to address the new challenges they face at the start of their career.

Using the outdoors, combined with theoretical workshops and guided reviews make a powerful learning experience. Lindley events enhance skills in areas such as planning and organizing, time management, working in (and managing) teams, influencing, communication and motivation.

As well as gaining new skills, Graduates receive constructive feedback on their performance throughout all programmes, so that they are fully aware of their effects on others.

After all, working with others in the outdoors demands some of the most challenging and creative solutions.

All Lindley programmes are designed after careful consultation of your needs. Talk to us now and ensure your Graduates reach their full potential.
